

AUSTIN WINKLEY & ASSOCIATES

Architecture Project Management

Established in 1987, Austin Winkley & Associates has built on the experience of its founding partners to provide innovative and comprehensive architectural services to clients across the UK. Creative, carefully-considered and well-managed design is a vital part of an architect's skills, and our work for a variety of clients over many years reflects this.

We design and manage innovative and inspired construction projects, ranging in value from £10,000 to £3 million. We are dedicated to providing a service to our clients which respects their requirements in relation to the cost and quality of their project. This often involves taking time to understand wider objectives, be these business, charitable, educational or private; and invariably involves ensuring that the client's aims are clarified and an informed balance struck between the various time, cost and quality requirements.

We work for and with a range of people, including small businesses, private domestic clients, charities, ecclesiastical clients, retail and leisure clients, voluntary organisations and public-sector organisations. We have experience and expertise in both new-build and refurbishment projects, with considerable experience of work to complex existing and historic buildings.

Services

The following services are provided as an integral part of the architectural service, where necessary or requested by clients:

- project management: the Association for Project Management APMP qualification within the office backs up our experience in this field with an industry-recognised standard
- Client Design Advisor service, registered with the RIBA. This service is intended to help clients with the initial stages of their project in order to clarify their brief and aspirations for the project, prior to design work being carried out
- disabled access design services: we have training and expertise in this area to ensure that the increasingly important issues of accessibility are fully considered and designed
- contract management, contract law and other legal matters: Austin Winkley & Associates considers that the effective contract management of projects, and an understanding of the legal side of the building industry, is a vital part of our expertise
- Planning Supervision of the health and safety aspects of projects
- consideration of energy efficiency and matters to do with the ecological aspects of building
- cost control, contract documents and quantified specifications
- conservation architecture and creative design in the context of historic buildings. We have wide-ranging experience in advising clients on alterations and repairs to Listed Properties, backed up by our registration with the AABC as Accredited Conservation Architects

In addition, other stand-alone services are provided:

- Expert witness work
- Analysis of building defects
- Condition Surveys of non-domestic properties

Austin Winkley & Associates have the following company credentials:
Membership of The Royal Institute of British Architects and the Association of Consultant Architects

Membership of the Association for Project Management and the Association for Project Safety

Membership of the Green Register

Membership of the Association for Studies in the Conservation of Historic Buildings

Membership of amenity societies, including the Victorian Society and 20th Century Society

Membership of the Construction History Society

Austin Winkley & Associates are committed to the efficient use of information technology in delivering projects on time and to budget. Current software in use includes Vectorworks, ArchiCAD, Word, Excel, MS Project, Frontpage, Photoshop, InDesign, Illustrator

Conservation

Austin Winkley & Associates has extensive experience of working on historic buildings. This experience is twofold:

- technical skills in carrying out conservation works to the historic fabric of buildings. This specialist skill is backed up by Tim Gough's accreditation as a conservation architect
- creative design in the context of listed and historic buildings. We have particular experience in making proposals for the effective use or reuse of historic buildings, obtaining planning and listed building consent for them, and implementing them for our clients in a cost-effective manner

We are experienced in applying for grants for conservation work for our clients - particularly our church clients - and are also familiar with tax and VAT issues in this field.

We have particular experience in dealing with water ingress into historic and existing buildings.

Project Management

There are two brief definitions of project management:

- turning vision into reality
- delivering a project on time, on budget, to the required quality

The first is the "soft" definition; the second the "hard" one.

We believe in both.

At the outset of the project, your vision of it as a client is key. This vision may be explicit or implicit, broad or narrow, complex or simple... What we do is to take that vision, gauge with you its feasibility, and work it up into a set of realisable proposals that generally incorporate creative architectural or interior design. This principle applies to all projects, however large or small.

Once these proposals are established, the hard definition of project management kicks in: you want your agreed proposals delivered properly. You do not want cost overruns. You want your important time constraints respected. And you want the right quality once the project is complete.

Our project management service manages these matters to try to ensure that time cost and quality are maintained. We do not say that we will succeed; all construction projects are complex, involve many people interacting, and are constrained by a dense set of legal requirements. But we undertake to manage the issues to try to ensure the correct outcome for you.

Our project management skills and experience are backed up by the APMP qualification, the RIBA Certificate in Project Management and our membership of the Association for Project Management

Development Advice

Our unique combination of project management, cost control, conservation and architectural design experience enables us to offer advice to clients considering the best use of the land, particularly where potential for redevelopment and releasing the value of land is possible. As well as commercial developments, we have a good understanding of the concerns of charities and not-for-profit organisations and a track-record of responding to these creatively.

We have particular skills in providing development advice in respect of:

- mixed-use developments
- charities, not-for-profit organisations and churches
- projects set in an historic environment - such as Listed Buildings or conservation areas
- conservation projects
